According to Army statistics, 526,081 men have been killed in four wars against foreign powers since 1847. The percentage of costs in relation to the national wealth has increased from six-tenth of one per cent in the Mexican War to 87.5 per cent in World War II.

Although few people are aware of the black teeth trade, the export of this unusual commodity is an important industry in Cyprus. In 1943, the British government promised to restore the business when the Japanese war was over. A promise is a promise, and Laborite Tom Driberg, M.P., brings the issue to the attention of the Colonial Secretary in the House of Commons, inquiring: whether there has been "a revival of the export of black artificial teeth from Cyprus to Siam."

On April 13, 1861, General Robert E. Lee bought two pair of custom-made shoes for $2.88—an amount never paid to the Bradshaw Shoe Store at Alexandria, Va. When students at Washington and Lee University recently learned of the old debt, they sent the company's heirs a "Payment" in Confederate currency. (A check was also forwarded.)
